My Father, My Hero

My father wakes before the sun,
He works so hard till day is done.
With gentle hands and smiling face,
He fills our home with love and grace.
He teaches me to dream and try,
To stand up strong and aim up high.
When I am sad, he stays near me,
His caring words set my heart free.
He is my guide in every way,
My shining star each night and day.

No crown he wears, yet this I know, "My father is my real hero."
On Father's Day, I proudly say, "Thank you, Dad, in every way."
Your love will shine deep in my heart, Forever close, though far apart.

The Last Oxygen Shop

At the corner of a broken street, stood a shop, small, silent, and weak.
No candles, no toys, no chocolate bars. Only bottles stacked in dusty jars.
A board outside hung old and blue: "Fresh Oxygen — Limited Few."
People waited in a tiring line. Just to breathe for a little time.
A little boy asked in surprise, "Did air once flow beneath open skies?"
His grandfather looked down in shame. And softly spoke with trembling pain:
"We had forests, wide and free. Rivers, flowers, and giant trees.
But humans cut and burned too fast, Never thought good things wouldn't last."
The boy looked at the bottled air, Then at the world so dull and bare.
And in that silence, deep and long. He understood what humans did wrong.
That day he planted a tiny seed. A single promise, a hopeful deed.
Because he knew beneath the gray. Even one tree could change someday.

The Power of Kindness

The power of kindness lies in its unique ability to transform lives through the simplest of gestures. A warm smile, a comforting word, or a helping hand costs nothing, yet its impact is immeasurable. When we show compassion, it creates a beautiful ripple effect—a single good deed inspires the recipient to pass the warmth along, brightening an entire community. Furthermore, practicing kindness benefits our health by releasing feel-good hormones that reduce stress and increase happiness for both the giver and the receiver. In a world that often feels divided, kindness serves as a universal language that heals emotional wounds and bridges gaps. Small, daily acts of love are truly the most powerful tools we have to change the world.

Mother's Day

To the hands that held me when I cried,
To the heart that stayed right by my side,
To the voice that calmed my every fear,
Mom, your love is always near.

You gave me strength when I felt small,
You cheered me on through every fall,
With gentle words and endless care,
You filled my life with love so rare.

No gift could match the things you do,
No flower shines as bright as you,
So on this day, I hope you see
How much your love has meant to me.

Jinisha Patel, VIII-A (Unity House)

Coping with Stress

Stress is a word we hear every day, from students before exams to elders at work. But stress is not caused by the task itself. It is caused by how we handle the situation. Every task has its demands. The key is to prioritise. Work done strategically helps us excel and keeps away unwanted burden. A simple way to manage tasks is to sort them into four types:

Important and Urgent – Do these first.

Important but Not Urgent – Schedule these.

Urgent but Not Important – Delegate if you can.

Neither Urgent and Not Important – Avoid these.

The secret to a stress-free life is to spend most of your time in the second category. If we complete important work before it becomes urgent, there will be no last-minute panic. Plan ahead, focus on what truly matters, and you will find that stress is just a problem of poor planning, not of too much work.
